CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION to INDONESIAN ALPHABET

MEMPERKENALKAN ALPHABET BAHASA INDONESIA

Chapter I

Introduction to Indonesian language

Chapter I. Section 1. The Indonesian Alphabet

Bahasa Indonesia, or the Indonesian language, is the national language of the people of the Republic of Indonesia. Bahasa Indonesia is also spoken in Malaysia because both Bahasa Indonesia and Malaysian (Bahasa Malaysia) are derived from Malay, which was a common regional trade language. Bahasa Indonesia is written in the Roman alphabet. More than two hundred twenty million people in Indonesia alone and approximately thirty million people in Malaysia speak it.

The people of Indonesia are spread out over sixteen thousand islands, from Sabang in the west to Merauke in the east. They belong to hundreds of culturally distinct ethnic groups, each with its own unique language, which is frequently not understood by any neighboring ethnic groups. However, united by their national language, Bahasa Indonesia, they form the nation of the Republic of Indonesia.

Chapter I. Section 2. Pronunciation

Every language has its own system of sounds that differs from any other language. When learning foreign languages, one begins by learning to make distinctions that are not made in ones own native language. Neither the correct pronunciation nor the ability to distinguish new sounds come automatically. They will be achieved through a process of comparison and imitation as you are guided through the exercises in the lessons that follow.

The ability to articulate like an Indonesian will come through constant imitation of the sentences and sounds spoken in the tapes. The following are explanations of how to pronounce the various letters and combinations of letters in Indonesian. As you read them, follow along on your tape and practice repeating the pronunciations.

Chapter I. Section 3. Syllables

A syllable in Bahasa Indonesia usually consists of a vowel + a consonant. It also includes any following consonant that does not immediately precede the next vowel, for example:

- a-yam chicken
- a-kan will
- ba-rang thing
- i-ni this is
- di-a he/she

Note: In writing, the affixes usually form separate syllables, in speech, you do not enunciate the syllables separately, for example:

- minum (to drink) + (suffix) an = mi-num-an (beverage), which you pronounce minuman

- ber (prefix) + uang (money) = ber-u-ang (to have money), which you pronounce beruang

Chapter I. Section 4. Stress

In Bahasa Indonesia, the syllables receive almost equal stress, particularly in words that have two syllables; for example: makan (to eat). If the word has more than two syllables, then there is only a slightly stronger stress on the second to last syllable, for example: makanlah (please eat) or perkembangan (development).

Chapter I. Section 5. Vowels

It is important to understand two qualities of Indonesian vowels:

1. Indonesian vowels are pure, not diphthongs like most English vowels.
2. Unlike English vowels, which are pronounced less strongly when they occur in unstressed syllables, all Indonesian vowels are pronounced equally strong, so there is no difference between the first and second vowels in saya or iklim.

Indonesian uses six vowel sounds:

- a like the ‘a’ in father, for example: apa (what?)
- e like the ‘e’ in pen, for example: pena (pen)
- e like the ‘e’ in student, for example: kelas (class)
- i like the ‘i’ in pin, for example: Indonesia (Indonesia)
- o like the ‘o’ in wrong, for example: mayor (major)
- u like the ‘oo’ in soup, for example: duduk (to sit)

Indonesian uses five diphthongs:

- ey like the ‘ay’ in day, for example: sampai (to arrive)
- ai like the ‘i’ in ice, for example: baik (good)
- ow like the ‘ow’ in know, for example: saudara (you)
- au like the ‘ou’ in out, for example: mau (to want)
- oi like the ‘oy’ in boy, for example: amboy (gosh!)

Chapter I. Section 6. Consonants

Bahasa Indonesia uses all the letters in the Latin alphabet, but the letters q and x are very rarely used.

The consonants P and B. The Indonesian P is pronounced like the unaspirated English P (no puff of air follows its production) in paper. The letter P can occur both in the initial or the final position of any syllable.

- popok diaper
- pipi cheek

The Indonesian B is pronounced like the unaspirated English B in the word baby.

- bayi baby

- bagi to divide

P and b in the syllable initial position. Note: Pay attention to the contrast between the two sounds when they occur initially:

- pagi (morning) vs. bagi (to divide)
- peras (to squeeze) vs. beras (uncooked rice)
- perang (war) vs. berang (to get angry)

B in the syllable final position. The letter B is pronounced like the letter P when it occurs at the end of a syllable:

- Sabtu (Saturday) sounds like Saptu
- absen (absent) sounds like apsen

The consonants C and J: The Indonesian C is pronounced like the English CH in the word chalk. The Indonesian J is pronounced like the English J in the word jury. Note: Pay attention to the contrast between the two sounds which occur initially in the syllable:

- curi (to steal) vs. juri (jury)
- calon (candidate) vs. jalan (street)

The consonants D and T: The Indonesian D is pronounced like the English D in duck. The Indonesian T is pronounced like the unaspirated English T in tip.

- tetap to remain
- tutup to close
- titip to entrust

D and T in syllable initial position. Note: Pay attention to the contrast between the two sounds:

- dua (two) vs. tua (old)
- dari (from) vs. tari (dance)

The consonant F. The Indonesian F is pronounced like the English F in father. It can occur both initially and finally in the syllable, as in the word famili (family). Note: In some cases, when the letter F starts a word it can optionally be pronounced as a P, for example:

- filem (film) may also be pronounced pilem
- fikir (to think) may also be pronounced pikir
- fabrik (clothing material or a factory) may also be pronounced pabrik

The consonants G and K. The Indonesian G is pronounced like the English G in God. The Indonesian K is pronounced like the unaspirated English K in kilo when it occurs initially and finally in the syllable, but when it occurs in the syllable final position it is pronounced as a glottal stop.

- gagah handsome
- kakak older sibling
- agak rather, somewhat

G and K in syllable initial position. Note : Pay attention to the contrast between the two sounds when they occur initially:

- gelas (drinking glass) vs. kelas (class)
- gosong (burnt) vs. kosong (empty)

K in syllable final position. K in this position is not released and is a glottal stop. Note: People from the island of Java pronounce the second syllable with the glottal stop, whereas those from other islands do not pronounce the final K sound at all.

- bapak father/sir
- makmur prosperous
- nenek grandmother/old woman

The consonant KH. The Indonesian KH is usually a single phonetic unit pronounced like the CH in the name of the great German composer Bach or the Scottish word for lake: loch, and it can occur initially and finally in the syllable.

- khayal to fantasize
- akhir final/ the end
- makhluq creature

Note : In some cases, the KH is written and pronounced like the letter K, and in others the K remains completely silent and only the H is pronounced.

- khabar (news) may be written and pronounced as kabar
- akhir (final/the end) is pronounced as akir
- khusus (special) is pronounced as husus

The consonant H. The Indonesian H is pronounced like the English H in hat. H can occur initially and finally in the syllable. Note: Beginners should make sure to enunciate the sound carefully because its presence or absence in most cases distinguishes the meaning.

- Tuhan (God) vs. tuan (sir/boss)
- mudah (easy) vs. muda (young)
- bawah (under) vs. bawa (to carry)

H between vowels. When H occurs between two vowels, it is often silent.

- tahu (to know) is pronounced tau
- lihat (to see) is pronounced liat

H between the same vowels. When it occurs between two vowels that are the same, the H must be pronounced especially clearly

- leher neck
- mohon to beg/to request)

The consonant L. The Indonesian L is always pronounced clearly and distinctly like the English L in lord, and it can occur initially and finally in the syllable.

- lapar hungry
- kepala head

The consonants M and N. The Indonesian M and N are pronounced like the English M in mama and N in nun, and they can occur initially and finally in the syllable.

- macam type of/ kind of/sort of
- nama name
- akan will do/is going to do

The consonant NG. The Indonesian NG is a single phonetic unit pronounced like the English NG in sing, which can occur both initially and finally in the syllable. Note : Since NG occurs only finally in English syllables, its initial occurrence in Indonesian ones presents a problem for English speakers

- sungai river
- ngantuk sleepy
- dengan with

The combination of consonants NG and G. The combination of the Indonesian NG and G is pronounced like the English single.

- sanggup capable of
- pinggang waist
- anggap to assume

The consonant NY. The Indonesian NY is a single phonetic unit pronounced like the English NY in ‘canyon’, which occurs only initially in the syllable.

- nyaman comfortable
- nyonya ma’am/madame

The consonant R. The Indonesian R is usually trilled by vibrating the tip of the tongue against the front part of the palate just behind the upper front teeth.

- ringan lightweight
- rasa to taste
- marah angry
- lapar hungry)
- opor chicken curry

The consonant S. The Indonesian S is pronounced like the English S in hats, as opposed to the s in the English ‘rocks’, and it can occur both initially and finally in the syllable.

- susah difficult
- rahasia secret
- salah wrong
- Indonesia Indonesia
- bekas ex/used item

The consonant SY. The Indonesian SY is a single phonetic unit pronounced like the English SH in sharp, and it can occur both initially and finally in the syllable.

- syair poem
- masyur famous

The consonant V. The Indonesian V is pronounced like the English F in father, and only occurs initially in the syllable.

- variasi variety
- visa visa)

The consonant Y. The Indonesian Y is pronounced like the English Y in you, and only occurs initially in the syllable.

- yaitu namely
- saya I/my/me
- sayang too bad

The consonant Z. The Indonesian Z is pronounced like the English Z in zoo, and occurs both initially and finally in the syllable.

- zaman era
- azaz foundation

CHAPTER II

GREETINGS

SALAM

Chapter II

Greetings

Chapter II. Section 1. Greetings

Indonesian greetings differ from American or British ones depending on the time of day.

Note: Indonesia uses 24 hour (aka military) time, not 12 hour (am/pm) time. See the examples below:

- Selamat pagi, (good morning); used from (approximately) 04:00 hrs (4 am) to 10:00 hrs (10 am).
- Selamat siang, (good day); used from (approximately) 10:00 hrs (10 am) to 15:00 hrs (3 pm).
- Selamat sore (good afternoon); used from (approximately) 15:00 hrs (3 pm) to 18:00 hrs (6 pm).
- Selamat petang (good evening); used from (approximately) 18:00 hrs (6 pm) to 20:00 hrs (8 pm).
- Selamat malam (good night); used between 20:00 hrs (8 pm) to 24:00 hrs (12 am).

Listen to how these greetings are pronounced on the tape that has been provided with this course. Practice repeating them until you are proficient.

Chapter II. Section 2. Cultural Notes

Indonesians do not commonly use the formal expressions below as much as they are used by English speakers in the U.S.A. or Great Britain. They are most often used in business relations and only very rarely in family or social situations. For instance, when waking up in the morning, a member of a family does not usually greet other family members with ‘good morning’, nor would a student say this to his roommate in the dormitory. Instead they would use phrases like lagi apa? (what are you doing?), or sudah mandi, belum? (have you taken a bath, yet?). As a foreigner, however, you are strongly advised to use the formal greetings you will learn below when you meet somebody.

Terms of address and title

In Bahasa Indonesia, it is unusual to use one of the words for you (anda, kamu, or saudara) unless the person addressed is a child or your close acquaintance. Instead of one of the words for you, they either say nothing where we would say you in English, or they use the person’s name, or more frequently they use the person’s title plus the name. For people whom you don’t know very well, it is better to use the title alone or the name plus the title. To address an adult female, married or single, use Ibu or Bu (ma’am) plus the name, while Nona plus the name is used only to address a single female (when unsure, use Ibu or Bu). Bapak or Pak plus the name is used to address an adult male.

Chapter II. Section 3. Vocabulary and Phrases

- | | |
|--|--|
| • Selamat pagi | Good morning. |
| • Ibu/Bu | Mrs./Ms./ma'am/one's mother |
| • Bapak/ pak | Mr./sir/one's father |
| • Apa kabar? | How are you? Literally: What's the news? |

| • Selamat tidur | Sleep well |
| • Selamat makan | Enjoy your meal |
| • Selamat ujian | Good luck on your exam |
| • Selamat naik pangkat | Congratulations on your promotion |

The tape provided will help you practice the pronunciation of the Indonesian vocabulary pertaining to this subject. Please, the first time you play the tape, just listen to all the words and phrases without repeating them. Then, the next time, and every time thereafter, repeat them out loud, and continue to listen to the tape and repeat the words and phrases over and over again until you are proficient.

Chapter II. Section 4. Grammar Notes

- Apa, literally means what. Apa is used as a question identifier both at the beginning and at the end of a sentence. For example:
 - Itu bis apa? What bus is that?

- Apa ada kantor polisi dekat sini? Is there a police station near here?

CHAPTER III

SELF INTRODUCTION

MEMPERKENALKAN DIRI

Chapter III

Self-Introductions

Chapter III. Section 1. Introductions

To introduce yourself or someone else, always begin with the word kenalkan (introduce).

Note: Indonesians usually shake hands when they meet each other

Chapter III Section 2. Vocabulary and Phrases

- Nama saya My name
- Siapa nama saudara? What is your name ?
- Mari kenalkan Let me introduce (informal)
- Boleh saya meperkenalkan May I introduce (formal)
- Ini This/these
- Senang bertemu Pleased to meet you
- Anda You/ your/ yours
- Kembali You're welcome (literally: to return)
- Juga Also, too

Now, listen to the pronunciations heard on the tape and practice repeating them.

Chapter III. Section 3. Cultural Notes

When you are speaking to somebody and want to say you, take care to choose the appropriate form of address. When speaking to children, intimate friends, or relatives, use either kamu or engkau. When speaking to people whom you hardly know, use anda with approximate social equals and saudara with higher status individuals. For adult men, Bapak or Pak (Sir) is used. For adult women, Ibu or Bu (Ma'am) is normally used. Nona (Miss) may be used for unmarried women, however, when you are not absolutely sure of the marital status of the woman to whom you are speaking, always use Ibu or Bu.

Chapter III. Section 4. Grammar Notes

To formally ask an adult's name, use 'siapa' (literally: who/whose).

- Siapa nama Bapak? What is your name, sir?
- Siapa nama Ibu? What's your name, ma'am?

To informally ask the name of an adult who is of similar age and/or social standing to you:

- Siapa nama anda? What's your name?

To informally ask the name of an adult who is older and/or of higher social standing than you:

- Siapa nama saudara? What's your name?

To ask a child's name:

- Siapa nama kamu? What's your name?

To ask the name of a third person use dia (his/ her):

- Siapa nama dia? What's his/her name?

To tell someone your name:

- Nama saya adalah _____ My name is _____

In Indonesian, the use of adalah (is/are) is optional (and rare), thus one can say:

- Nama saya adalah Nano or Nama saya Nano (My name is Nano)
- Nama dia adalah Mala or Nama dia Mala (Her name is Mala)
- Note: Be sure to put them in the right order, for saya nama means I am the name!

Chapter III. Section 5. Dialogues

Below are some examples of introductions. Note: The majority of Indonesians use only one name, especially those from Java. Pay attention to the conversation below. The man refers to the woman as Ibu (ma'am), even though he does not know if she is married or single. Ibu is the proper term for greeting an adult woman if you don't know her marital status.

Dialogue III-1

Mr. Nano meets Ms. Mala for the first time at a social gathering:

Bapak Nano: "Selamat malam, Ibu. Nama saya Pak Nano. Apa kabar? Siapa nama Ibu?"

Ibu Mala: "Selamat malam, Pak Nano. Saya baik-baik saja. Terima kasih.
Nama saya Mala. Apa kabar?"

Bapak Nano: "Kabar baik. Terima kasih. Senang bertemu Ibu."

Ibu Mala: "Sama-sama."

Dialogue III-2.

While Ms. Mala and Mr. Nano are conversing with each other, an old friend happens by and introductions are made:

Ibu Mala: "Mari kenalkan teman saya. Nona Lena, ini Pak Nano. Pak Nano, ini Nona Lena."

Pak Nano: "Senang bertemu anda. Apa kabar, Nona?"

Nona Lena: "Kabar baik. Senang bertemu anda juga. Apa kabar?"

Pak Nano: "Baik-baik saja. Terima kasih."

Nona Lena: “Kembali.”

Chapter III. Section 6. Exercises

Activity III-1

Answer the questions below based on dialogs dialogues 1 and 2 above.

1. What part of the day did the conversation take place?
2. What was the woman’s name?
3. Whose friend was Miss Lena?
4. Why did Mr. Nano refer to Ms. Mala as “Ibu?”
5. Does the title “Nona” refer to a single or married woman?

Activity III-2

You will hear four different greetings on the tape. Try to match the number of the corresponding greeting with the appropriate picture.

Where are the four pictures?

1. b.

2. d.

Activity III-3

Listen to the short greeting expressions on the tape. Circle the correct one from the selections below.

1. a. Selamat pagi.
b. Sampai jumpa lagi.
 2. a. Kabar baik
b. Baik- baik saja.
 3. a. Nama saya adalah Hari.
b. Nama dia adalah Hari.
 4. a. Senang bertemu anda.
b. Senang bertemu saudara.
 5. a. Kabar apa saudara?
b. Apa kabar saudara?

Activity III-4

Imagine a situation in which an Indonesian uses the following greetings. Write the appropriate response for each greeting in the space provided.

1. Selamat pagi._____
 2. Apa kabar?_____
 3. Siapa nama saudara?_____
 4. Senang bertemu saudara._____
 5. Terima kasih._____

Activity III-5

How would you say the following in Indonesian:

1. My name is _____
 2. His name is _____

3. Let me introduce my friend _____
4. Good morning. _____
5. Nice to meet you. _____

Activity III-6

Translate the dialog below into English.

Dialogue III-1:

- Pak Nano: "Selamat petang, Bu!" Nama saya pak Nano. Apa khabar? Siapa nama, Ibu?
- Ibu Mala: "Selamat petang, Pak Nano!" Saya baik-baik saja. Terima kasih. Nama saya Mala. Apa kabar?
- Pak Nano:: "Kabar baik. Terima kasih. Senang bertemu Ibu."

CHAPTER IV

NOMOR-NOMOR

Chapter IV

Numbers

Chapter IV Section 1. Cardinal Numbers

It is very easy to count in Indonesian. After learning the first ten numbers, the rest will come even easier. Listen to the tape and try to mimic it until you are able to count to ten fluently.

0.nol or kosong (lit. empty)
satu dua tiga empat lima enam tujuh delapan or lapan
sembilan
sepuluh

Chapter IV. Section 2. Grammar Notes

- The prefix *se is used to mean one instead of satu to say the numbers 10, 11, 100, 1000, etc. Thus, we say sepuluh for 10 vs. satupuluh and sebelas for 11. Numbers in the teens are indicated by adding the word Belas

Chapter IV. Section 3. Ordinal Numbers

Ordinal numbers in Indonesian are formed by adding ke to the front of the cardinal number.

Example :

1 st	satu	kesatu	pertama	(another word for ‘first’)
2 nd	dua	kedua
5 th	lima	kelima
10th	sepuluh	kesepuluh,	etc.

Chapter IV. Section 4. Fractions

In Indonesian, fractions are formed by using the syllable per to join the numerator and the denominator.

Note that per does not mean 'over'.

Examples :

one	seperempat
three fourth	tigaperempat
seven and one fourth	tujuh dan seperempat
three eighth	tigaperdelapan
one half/half	satuperdua , also called ' setengah '

Chapter IV. Section 5. Plurals

In Indonesian, to make nouns plural, all you have to do is say the word twice, or in writing, add the number 2 after the noun

For example:

nama (name) (nama-nama or nama2 = names.

Orang (person) (orang-orang or orang2 = people.

Note: Sometimes it is rather obvious that the noun must be plural. For example, if you wanted to say Saya mau gosok gigi (I want to brush my teeth), it is automatically assumed that you brush all of your teeth, and not just one of your teeth. In this case, there is no need to say Saya mau gosok gigi-gigi saya.

Chapter IV. Section 6. Exercises

Activity IV-1

The sequence for numbers in their teens is started below, please complete the exercise:

- | | |
|----------------|-----------|
| 11. se belas | 16. _____ |
| 12. dua belas | 17. _____ |
| 13. tiga belas | 18. _____ |
| 14. _____ | 19. _____ |
| 15. _____ | |

- Numbers in the tens, such as 10, 20, 30 etc. have the suffix puluh.

Activity IV-2. A

Follow the examples and fill in the missing numbers below:

10. sepuluh	50.	83.
20.	63.	90.
30. tiga puluh	75. tujuh puluh lima	99.
41. empat puluh satu	76.

- Numbers in the hundreds and thousands receive the suffixes ratus and ribu respectively. In English, the word ‘and’ is sometimes used in numbers over one hundred, i.e., two hundred and fifteen. That is never the case in Indonesian. Thus one says dua ratus lima belas and not dua ratus dan lima belas.

Activity IV-2. B

Follow the examples provided, and fill in the blanks below:

1. seratus
2. 200 _____
3. tiga ratus

CHAPTER V

CLASSIFIERS

KLASIFIKASI

Chapter V

Classifiers

Chapter V. Section 1. Grammar Notes

While classifiers are frequently used in writing, they are seldom used when speaking. Below are some of the commonly used classifiers:

For things in general

Examples: sebuah mobil
dua buah televisi

(buah (lit. fruit).

= a car

= two televisions

For people

Example: seorang Amerika
dua orang polisi

(orang (lit. person)

= an American

= two policemen

For animals

Examples: seekor burung
tiga ekor kucing

(ekor (lit. tail)

= a bird

= three cats

For flat or thin objects

Examples: sehelai kertas

(helai / lembar (lit. sheet)

= a piece of paper

For mail/weapons

Examples: sepucuk pistol
empat pucuk surat

(pucuk (lit. top/tip)

= a pistol

= four letters

For small round objects

Example: sebutir mutiara

(butir (lit. seed)

= one pearl

For a pair of things

Examples: sepasang remaja
sepasang sepatu
sepasang anting2

(pasang (lit. pair)

= a couple of young teens

= a pair of shoes

= a pair of earrings

For a pack of things

Example: sebungkus rokok

= (bungkus (lit. wrapped things)

= a pack of cigarettes

For a slice of bread/cake /wood (potong (lit. cut))

Example: sepotong kue
sepotong kayu
sepotong roti

= a slice of cake

= a piece of wood

= a slice of bread

For cigarettes/ tree branch/trunk	= (batang (lit. trunk))
sebatang rokok	= a cigarette
sebatang cabang pohon	= a tree trunk

Notes

- Verbs in Indonesian do not change.

Thus, the verb punya ‘to have’, beli ‘to buy’, terima ‘to accept’ etc. remain the same for the past, present and future tense. We use the auxiliary verbs and words to indicate a specific time reference. If the sentence does not contain any auxiliary verb, then it is assumed it is past tense.

Saya beli mobil kemarin.

I bought a car yesterday.

Dia akan terima surat besok.

He will receive a letter tomorrow.

Ibu beli sebuah mangga.

Mother bought a mango.

- The standard word order of Indonesian sentences is just like in English: subject + predicate (verb) + object

Saya + beli + mobil

I bought a car

- The word ada means there is/ are/were, ‘to have’, or to exist.

It is placed after nouns or pronouns.

Di kelas bahasa Indo. Ada tiga orang guru.

(In the Indonesian class there are three teachers).

Note that by using the number in front of the noun, you don’t need to pluralize the noun.

Thus we don’t say

Di kelas ada tiga orang guru2.

Regu saya, means ‘my squad’. The noun comes before the pronoun. If the noun comes after the pronoun Saya regu, it means ‘I am the squad’. Be sure to put it in the right order.

Chapter V. Section 2. Vocabulary

CHAPTER VI

DAY S OF THE WEEK, TIMES, MONTHS

ALMANAK

Chapter VI

Days of The Week, Times, and Months

Chapter VI. Section 1. Cultural Note

In Indonesia, we have the expression Jam karet 'time is rubber', therefore it is flexible. Indonesians tend to have a much more casual attitude towards time. So, if you are an hour late for your appointment, it is really nothing to get upset about. Likewise, if you are not seen right on time for your scheduled appointment, don't get upset. If things don't get done today, there's always tomorrow or the next day. The excuse people use to justify their tardiness is Jam karet.

The only things that run on time are airline, train, and ship arrivals or departures. Also, people tend to be on time for weddings or funerals as well as government run events or religious ceremonies.

Chapter VI. Section 2. Grammar Notes

- Berapa?

'how much/ many' is the question word used to form questions involving numbers.

Jam berapa? Means 'what time?' and berapa jam? Means 'how many hours?'. Be sure to put it in the right order.

- Apa?

Lit. 'what?' is the general question marker which we use to turn most sentences into questions.

Hari apa? 'what day?' Do not use jam apa when asking 'what time'. Use Jam berapa? (see berapa above)

Chapter VI. Section 3. Periods of the Day

- pagi-pagi buta (lit. blind morning since it's still dark)
from 3:-5:00 am
- pagi (morning)
from 5:00-11:00 am
- siang (midday)
from 11:00-3:00 pm
- sore (late afternoon until dusk)
from 3:00-6:00 pm
- petang (evening)
from 6:00-8:00 pm
- malam (night)
from 8:00-10:00 pm
- malam-malam (very late at night)

- from 10:00-12:00 am
- tengah malam (midnight)
from 12:00-3:00 am

Chapter VI. Section 4. Days of the Week

As with the Roman calendar, the Indonesian calendar starts the week with → hari Minggu ‘Sunday’ . Hari is the word for ‘day’ , while minggu without hari written in lower case means ‘week’ . As you read the terms below, listen to how they are pronounced on your tape. You may want to practice repeating them to improve your pronunciation.

Hari Minggu	Sunday
hari Senin	Monday
hari Selasa	Tuesday
hari Rabu	Wednesday
hari kamis	Thursday
hari Jumat	Friday
hari Sabtu	Saturday
se minggu	one week
kemarin	yesterday
kemarin dulu	the day before yesterday
dua hari yang lalu	two days ago
besok	tomorrow
lusa	the day after tomorrow
hari ini	today
minggu ini	this week
minggu depan	next week
minggu lalu	last week

Example:

Kalau hari ini adalah hari Senin, besok adalah hari Selasa dan kemarin (adalah) hari Minggu.

(If today is Monday, tomorrow will be Tuesday and yesterday was Sunday).

Note that in Indonesian, the verb adalah ‘to be’ (is, am, are, was, etc.) doesn’t change, however, it is optional. It is used more in written language than in speech.

Chapter VI. Section 5. Months

- Bulan is the Indonesian word for both ‘month’ and ‘moon’.
Months in Indonesian are just like the Roman calendar, except the spellings and the pronunciations are slightly different.

Bulan Januari	Bulan Pebruari	Bulan Maret
Bulan April	Bulan Meia	Bulan Juni

Bulan Juli	Bulan Agustus	Bulan September
Bulan October	Bulan Nopember	Bulan Desember

To say 'this month' we say bulan ini.

To say 'last month' we say bulan yang lalu (lit. the month which was past).

To say ‘next month’ we say bulan depan (lit. the month which is ahead). You will hear how to pronounce the months in Indonesian on the tape provided. Listen and repeat them until you are proficient.

- To ask ‘what month is this month?’ we use the question word apa

Bulan apa bulan ini? What month is this month?

Bulan ini adalah bulan Mei (This month is the month of May)

Example:

Kalau bulan ini adalah bulan Juni, bulan depan (adalah) bulan Juli dan bulan yang lalu (adalah) bulan Mei.

(If this month is the month of June, next month will be July and last month was May).

Chapter VI. Section 6. The Year

Tahun is the word for ‘year’. Tahun 2000, means ‘the year of 2000’. Be sure to put it in the right order, for 2000 tahun, means ‘2000 years’.

- To ask what year is this we use the question word berapa.

Berapa tahun? How many years?

Chapter VI. Section 7. Telling Time

When the time is on the hour, we use the word jam (hour), or pukul (lit. to strike) followed by the number of the hour

12: 00 O'Clock = Jam (pukul) 12:00

4 : 00 O'Clock = Jam (pukul) 4:00

Please note that you have to put it in the right order, because if you say the number first, followed by the hour i.e. 12 jam, instead of Jam 12, it means '12 hours'. It is important when you are telling the time or asking the time, to always begin with Jam or pukul.

We use the word pada followed by the time in sentences giving times that events happen.

Saya ke sekolah pada jam 7:00 pagi(I go to school at 7:00am.)

Mc.Donald buka pada jam 9:00 pagi. (Mc.Donald opens at 9:00am)

- To ask ‘what time is it?’ we use the question word berapa

Jam berapa ini? What time is it?

Menit is the Indonesian word for ‘minute’, while detik is the Indonesian word for ‘seconds’.

- When the time is on the half hour, we say it is ‘half’ to the next hour’ and we use the word setengah.

6:30 = Jam (pukul) setengah tujuh.

1:30 = Jam (pukul) setengah dua.

- When the time is between one minute past and twenty nine minutes past, we use the word lewat ‘past’. Note that you must say the Jam ‘hour’ first, then lewat ‘past’, then the number of the minutes which have passed.

7 : 20 = Jam (pukul) tujuh lewat dua puluh (menit)

10: 15 = Jam (pukul) sepuluh lewat lima belas.

Or Jam sepuluh lewat seperempat (a quarter past 10)

- When the time is between twenty nine minutes to the hour and one minute to the hour, we must use the word kurang ‘less’ or ‘minus’. We must say the number of the next hour, the word kurang, then the number of minutes until that hour.

8 : 40 = Jam (pukul) sembilan kurang dua puluh.

11: 45 = Jam (pukul) dua belas kurang lima belas.

Or Jam dua belas kurang seperempat (a quarter to 12)

- When the time is on the hour, that is the minute hand is on the 12, we say the word jam followed by the number of the hour.

3:00 = Jam (pukul) tiga tepat (it’s 3:00 O’clock sharp)

12:00 = Jam (pukul) dua belas tepat.

Chapter VII

Autobiographical Data

Chapter VII. Section 1. Cultural Notes

Indonesian people like to talk. They are friendly even to strangers.

They strike up conversation very easily by approaching you on buses, trains or airplanes. They are especially curious about foreigners. Once the greetings are over, you will find yourself barraged with some personal and very intimate questions, such as family background, marital status, social status, etc. Do not feel offended by this. You have to understand that they are merely trying to be friendly and using such topics as small talk, much like Westerners would discuss sport events or the weather forecast. Use this opportunity to practice your Indonesian with them.

Chapter VII. Section 2. Vocabulary and Phrases

Tinggal	to live/ reside/ remain/ leave
Di	in/on/at
Daerah	area/region
Jakarta Barat	west Jakarta
orang tua	parents
juga	also
berasal	to originate/ to come from
dari	from
kota	city
propinsi	province
sudah	already
sudah berapa lama	how long already
bekerja	to work
beralamat	to have an address

menikah	to be married
bercerai	to get divorced
permisi dulu	excuse me
senang berkenalan	glad to meet you sama-sama same with me (lit. same-same)

As you read the terms above you may listen to them on your tape. Practice repeating them aloud.

Chapter VII. Section 3. Grammar Notes

nama saya ‘my name’. The order is the noun nama ‘name’ before the pronoun saya ‘my’. If the pronoun saya comes before the noun nama → saya nama, it means ‘I am the name’. Be sure to put it in the right order.

saya tinggal ‘I live/reside’. Verbs in Indonesian do not change their form to indicate tense. Thus, the verb tinggal stays the same regardless if you speak of the past, present or future. We add the auxiliary verbs or words to indicate a specific time reference, such as:

sudah + verb to indicate the past tense

saya sudah makan = I have already eaten.

belum + verb to indicate the action has not been done.

saya belum makan = I have not eaten yet/ I have not eaten akan + verb to indicate future tense

saya akan makan = I will eat/ I am going to eat

sedang + verb to emphasize the present tense

saya sedang makan = I am (currently) eating

If no auxiliary is added to the verb, it usually means past tense

saya makan = I ate

Saya punya isteri dan dua anak ‘I have a wife and two children.’ The order of the sentence is the same as in English.

subject + predicate (verb) + object berasal/ berkeluarga/ bekerja /bercerai/ beralamat are the ber verbs. They can have any one of the following meanings:

- ‘to have’ with nouns ber + keluarga = to have a family ber + alamat = to have an address ber + asal = to have an origin ber + isteri =to have a wife

- ‘to be’ with verbs → ber + cerai = to be divorced ber + kerja = to be at work

nomor telepon rumah saya/ nomor telepon kantor saya ‘my home phone #’, ‘my work phone #’.

The order is the possessive rumah saya ‘my house’, followed by the noun they modify. nomor telepon saya ‘my phone number’.

CHAPTER VIII

FAMILY

KELUARGA

Chapter VIII

Family

Chapter VIII. Section 1. Cultural Notes

Indonesians consider their family the most important thing in their life. Family in Indonesia often consists of not only a husband, a wife and their children, but also their in laws. They usually live together in the same house. Do not feel offended when you are asked about your marital status by an Indonesian whom you have just met for the very first time. This is not intended to be rude but is considered a friendly gesture.

Most Indonesians are married by the time they are 25 years old. Some even have one or two children by that age. When socializing with Indonesians, you are expected to inquire about their family, job, social status, etc.

Remember to use the proper greetings when addressing someone you meet for the first time, especially when addressing older people or those with high social status.

Chapter VIII. Section 2. Vocabulary

Keluarga	family
Mereka	they/ their/ them
Yang	which/ which one
Kami	we/ our/ us

semua	all
cucu	grandchild
cucu-cucu	grandchildren

On your tape listen to the above terms at least once to familiarize yourself with them. Then listen again and practice repeating them.

Chapter VIII. Section 3. Grammar Notes

Noun modifiers such as adjectives and possessives always follow the word/words being modified with the relative pronoun yang 'which' or 'the one who' sometimes is in the middle.

For example:

rumah yang bagus dan besar =The house which is nice and big.

anak mereka = their child. The noun anak 'child' is followed by the pronoun mereka 'their' to make it possessive. Be sure to put it in the right order for mereka anak means they are the children.

berumur/ bersekolah / berpangkat/ bekerja are ber-verbs.

They mean either one of the following :

'to have' with nouns in general = ber + pangkat

'to be' with nouns in general = ber + sekolah

'to have' with simple verb = ber + cerai

Ibu Noya tidak bekerja diluar = Mrs. Noya does not work outside, meaning she is not a career woman. The negativizer here is tidak to negate the verb bekerja.

dipanggil oleh = is/ was/ were/ has have been called by

This is the passive voice → di + verb.

Chapter VIII. Section 4. Reading Text
