CHAPTER I

THE WEATHER

Chapter I. Section 1. Cultural Notes

Indonesia uses Celcius in describing the degree of temperature. In Indonesia, the weather is often described using the word ‘enak’, lit. delicious. We use the word ‘enak’ to mean anything good.

Here it is used to describe the nice weather. Due to its geographical location, the weather in Indonesia is always hot and humid all year around. Actually, Indonesia has only two seasons: hot and wet. The hot season lasts from May through October. The wet season lasts from November through April. The temperature ranges from 75 degrees Fahrenheit to well above 95 degrees Fahrenheit with extremely high humidity.

Indonesian people usually take a bath twice daily. Even though the weather is hot and humid, Indonesian women don’t wear shorts and tank tops like their Western counterparts. Wearing skimpy clothes in Indonesia is not considered appropriate for females, although some women from big cities do wear them. Women clad in bikinis are a rare sight on the beaches in Indonesia. For males to wear shorts is okay, not on formal occasions, though. Umbrellas here are used both on rainy days or when it’s hot and sunny. Most women use umbrellas to protect their skin from the sun. So, don’t be surprised to see people use umbrellas on a sunny day.

My City

I was born and brought up in Jakarta, Indonesia. Jakarta is a big city and highly populated. It has about ten million people. Formerly it was called Batavia. Jakarta is the capital city of the Republic of Indonesia. This city is located in east Java.

In this city I reside in Grogol area that is on the West side of Jakarta. My address is Muwardi street 4 number 12. Across from my house there is a market that is always crowded. Grogol Market is the name. Behind my house we have railways. The distance from my house to Grogol market is about twenty meters.

Close to my house there is a post office. The post office located at the corner of Makaliwe Street. From my house to the post office takes about ten minutes walking. At the post office they sell many postal items.

Next to Grogol Market, there is a movie theater which plays both Western and Indonesian movies. Approximately one kilometer on the east side of my house, there is a Chinese restaurant. Lots of people like to dine there because the food is good and also they are not too expensive.

I also like to eat over there. My favorite dish is meatball and noodle soup. I usually walk there because is nearby.

CHAPTER III
RESTAURANTS
DI RUMAH MAKAN

CHAPTER III

RESTAURANTS

Chapter III. Section 1. Cultural Notes

Dining in Indonesia can be very pleasurable, especially if you are brave enough to try the local food. It wasn't too long ago that when you traveled to Indonesia, you did not find any fast food restaurants, but today fast food chains are everywhere, mainly in the major cities.

Most traditional dishes in Indonesia center around rice. Almost every dish you order comes with a bowl of rice. Anything without rice is considered a snack or jajan. There are plenty of Chinese restaurants “Rumah makan China” in Indonesia. If you like noodles, they are widely available in Chinese restaurants.

Most Indonesians, from Sumatra, Kalimantan and Java, use the fingers of their right hand to eat their meals. People from Maluku Island and Northern Sulawesi Island use spoons and forks to eat their meal. It is a common sight in street side stalls or warungs to see people eat with their fingers. When eating out in restaurants however, forks, spoons and knives are normally used. In Chinese restaurants, chopsticks are provided.

Breakfast usually consists of fried rice or bread with tea or coffee. For lunch and dinner we serve rice, some meat or fish, and cooked or fresh vegetables. Indonesians eat their rice with sambal or hot sauce. Dessert or fresh fruit is usually served after main course. It is called “obat pencuci mulut” (remedy to wash your mouth). Indonesia has a large variety of soft drinks as well as liquor such as beer, both local and imported. The nightclubs usually serve variety of liquors.

The majority of Indonesians drink tea, coffee or fruit juices. Coffee and tea are served with sugar. As a foreigner, never drink the tap water unless it has been boiled for five minutes first. Bottled water is also widely available. Avoid uncooked foods if you can as they have probably been rinsed in tap water. Don't use ice cubes because they are made of unboiled water. Chill your bottled water or bottled juice in the refrigerator before consuming it if you like.

Chapter III. Section 3. Grammar Notes

In this topic, Di Rumah Makan, you have learned new vocabulary, language functions and several points of grammar.

In earlier topics, we learned how to indicate future, present and past tense. The verbs don't change their form. We know that the tense is determined by the context of the sentence and the auxiliary verb it uses.

- To ask what one had for breakfast/ lunch or dinner, we simply say:

Untuk makan siang, saudara makan apa?
For lunch, what did you eat?

Pagi tadi, saudara minum apa?
This morning, what did you drink?

- To reply to that question, simply say:

Untuk makan siang, saya makan nasi goreng.
For lunch, I ate fried rice

Tadi pagi saya minum kopi dengan susu.
This morning I had coffee and milk.

- To say what you'd like to order, just say:

Saya mau pesan nasi goreng.
I want to order fried rice.

- To say the food was delicious:

Nasi goreng itu enak/ lezat sekali
The fried rice was very delicious.

- If the food was not good, say:

The food was less than tasty.

- To ask what one likes to have:

Saudara suka makanan apa?

What do you like to eat? Lit. What food do you like.

Saudara suka minum apa?

What would you like to drink?

- To answer that question, say:

Saya suka makan/ minum

I like to eat/ drink.

To say: “I don’t think...” we usually begin our sentence with a positive note. Thus we begin with “I do think...” proceed with a negative qualifier in the predicate.

In English one would say ‘I don’t think that the food is too spicy’, in Indonesian we say:

Saya kira makanan itu tidak berapa pedas.

I do think the food is not too spicy.

Saya kira rumah makan itu tidak baik.

I think that restaurant is not too great.

- To change a verb to a noun, add the suffix an. For example,

makan ‘to eat’ becomes makanan ‘food’

minum ‘to drink’ becomes minuman ‘beverage’

masak ‘to cook’ becomes masakan ‘dish’

CHAPTER IV

SHOPPING AND SIGHT SEEING

BERBELANJA DAN MELIHAT-LIHAT

Chapter IV

Shopping and Sightseeing

Chapter IV. Section 1. Cultural Notes

Shopping

Shopping can be a very enjoyable experience in Indonesia if you are good at bargaining. In most shops or stores, they do not have fixed prices. Thus it is assumed that one has to bargain to get the price to the level where it is agreeable to both the buyer and the seller. It is a general rule that most Indonesians will not settle for less than a 10% reduction from the asking price. The prices you cannot bargain are usually those in the big department stores where the prices are already written on the items. But even so, one can always bargain if he thinks this price is too high, especially if one intends to buy an expensive item. You can determine what the normal price is by shopping around first. When you have offered the maximum price, which you are willing to pay, don't budge.

Be especially careful when going to art shops catering to foreigners. The prices here are marked up to sometimes 300 to 400% than the normal prices elsewhere. The tip to do a successful bargain is to take a native with you when shopping. But when that is impossible, you have to know how to make the sellers know that you know the correct price and that you have gone to other places where you can get the cheaper price.

There are several tips, which are very important to keep in mind. You never let the seller knows that you are interested in that particular item. The idea is that you have to start offering your price very low, perhaps 300% off the price they offer you. Then go slowly up, in the meantime, pretend to walk away. The seller will then try to chase you and counter offering with a much higher price. You then offer a bit more than your initial price, still do not appear that you are very eager to get that item. Continue this until you are sure that the seller will not go any lower. State your final offer and now you can pretend to really go away. If the seller won't budge anymore and appear disappointed at your final offer, then you can be sure that the price is right for you. Please do not get angry because you know that the price they ask you is marked up by several hundred percents. And do not make an offer if you don't intend to buy. The seller might agree with your offer and you are stuck.

Reneging is very uncommon in Indonesia. Also be very aware that most sales are final. It is very hard to exchange items you already purchased, let alone return them and ask for a full refund, even though there are no signs on the walls saying so. Last but not least, please make sure that you have agreed on the price before you accept any goods or services.

Bargaining has to take place before you consume a product or accept a service. Above all, using the Indonesian language when bargaining is the most useful weapon one can possess.

Pergi Berbelanja

Biasanya toko-toko atau pasar-pasar di Indonesia buka pada pagi hari. Pasar-pasar pada umumnya buka pada pagi-pagi sekali, sebelum matahari terbit. Kebanyakan orang Indonesia berbelanja keperluan dapur setiap hari. Sebagian besar adalah wanita. Orang Indonesia suka makanan segar untuk memasak. Karena kebiasaan sebagian besar orang Indonesia adalah makan nasi tiga kali sehari, sebab itu mereka harus masak pada pagi hari.

Pasar-pasar buka pada jam enam pagi, sedangkan toko-toko buka pada jam delapan pagi. Pasar-pasar tutup pada jam enam sore. Toko-toko dan supermarket tutup pada jam sembilan malam.

Di Indonesia ada banyak pasar swalayan atau supermarket. Banyak orang berbelanja padi pagi hari di pasar, sedangkan orang lebih suka berbelanja ke toko-toko untuk keperluan lainnya pada malam hari. Sebabnya adalah karena tidak terlalu panas.

Orang Indonesia suka tidur siang. Mereka biasanya tidur siang antara jam dua dan jam empat sore. Sebab itu toko-toko tidak berapa ramai dengan pengunjung atau pembeli. Tentu saja tidak semua orang pergi ke toko punya maksud untuk berbelanja. Ada juga yang datang hanya untuk melihat-lihat saja atau mengobrol dengan penjual-penjual.

Toko-toko menjadi ramai dengan pengunjung kalau ada obral.

Juga pada hari gajian. Orang Indonesia pandai tawar menawar kalau berbelanja.

Going shopping

Usually the stores and markets in Indonesia open in the morning. The stores generally open early in the morning before sunrise. Indonesian people do their grocery shopping every day. The majority of the shoppers are females. They like to use fresh produce when cooking. Because most Indonesians consume rice three times a day, therefore they have to cook early in the morning.

The markets open at six AM, while the stores open at eight AM. The markets close at six PM. The stores and supermarkets close at nine PM. Indonesia have lots of supermarkets. Many people go to the markets to buy the grocery in the morning and prefer to shop for other things in the evening. The weather is not that hot in the evening. Indonesians like to take a nap in the afternoon. They usually nap between two and four o'clock in the afternoon. Therefore the stores are not that crowded in the afternoon with visitors and customers. Of course not all of the people go to the stores with the intention of shopping. There are those who come to the stores just to sight seeing or chitchat with the shopkeepers. The stores are crowded with customers when there are sales, also on pay day. Indonesians are good at bargaining when they go shopping.

Dialogue IV-1

Seller: “May I help you, sir?”

Customer: “I am from America. I am looking for a carved Balinese statue which is made of teak wood.”

Seller: ”Wow, you can speak Indonesian.” I have many carved statues from Bali and they are not that expensive. You may come in and have a look at them.

Customer: ”I want a medium size statue with a high quality. I want a statue from teak wood and not too expensive.”

Seller: ”You may choose anything. I will give you the least expensive price for you sir.”

Customer: ”How much is this one?”

- Seller: "Oh that is the best one. Also not expensive. Only Rp.100.000-."
- Customer: "Oh, that is too expensive. Can I have it for Rp. 30.000-?"
One hundred thousand is too expensive. I don't want it then if you can not lower the price. I know somewhere else is much cheaper."
- Seller: "Oh, Rp. 30.000.- is impossible. I won't have any profit, even the capital is more than that. Please add some more. These statues are the best in this area."
- Customer: "OK. I will take it if it's Rp. 40.000- I can go somewhere else".
- Seller: "Can you add some more? I have to make some profit. Rp.50.000- you may take it."
- Customer: "Okay. Here is my money. Please wrap it well because I will return to my country."
- Seller: "When will you go back, sir?"
- Customer: "Next week. Thank you."
- Seller: "Thank you very much sir."

Dialogue IV-2

- Mrs. Marta: "Okay. I would like to buy some clothes for my kids. They also need new shoes for school. My husband also needs shirts and some new socks. Perhaps also a tie for him."
- Miss Linda: "What about yourself? Do you need new dress? I heard they have a big sale in Matahari."
- Mrs. Marta: "Oh, is that so? Indeed I also need a new gown for my sister's wedding next month. But only if there's money left over. The most important thing is my kid. Let's go."
- Miss Linda: "Will we take a bus? My car is broken. Tomorrow I will get it from the shop."

Mrs. Marta: "Just take a cab. I don't like to go by city bus, too many people. Never mind. I will pay the fare. I also like to have noodle soup over there."

Miss Linda: "Okay. Let's go. I like to get there quickly. I have not had my dinner yet."

Travel and Tourism

Chapter V. Section 1. Cultural Notes

The Geography

Indonesia is a very beautiful country. It is the fourth largest country in the world with about 220 million people. It straddles the equator, so the days are all the same length. Indonesia has only two seasons: wet and hot. The hot season is slightly hotter than the wet season, while the wet season is slightly wetter and not quite as hot as the hot season. Rainy season starts from November to March. The hot season starts from April to October where the weather is usually very hot. The temperature ranges from 78 to 95 degrees F all year long with high humidity. Indonesia has so many interesting places for tourists to visit.

The outer limits of this almost 7,000 Kms archipelago stretches from Sabang to Merauke and are as far as California is from Bermuda. With about 16,000 large and small islands, Indonesia is the largest archipelago in the world. Of the ten largest islands in the world, Indonesia claims the better part of three; New Guinea, Borneo and Sumatera. Only 6,600 islands are named and about 900 islands are permanently settled. Indonesia is a country of diversity and incredible beauty.

The country is an ethnological goldmine; the variety of its human geography of the approximately 400 ethnic groups scattered throughout Indonesia, from Sabang to Merauke. Many of Indonesia's ethnic pockets remain very isolated due to the archipelago's size, its jungles, the swamps, highlands and the very complex of its customs. Some people say that a journey through Indonesia is like taking a journey through time. You can find life of 5,000 years apart from one area to the other. Some people live in the Neolithic, Bronze, Middle, while others live in the advanced Nuclear ages.

Ever since the Nomadic Malay hunter-gatherers settled and started cultivating rice in the fertile ashes of burned forests and on the slopes of the volcanoes around 5,000 years ago, rice has been at the very center of Indonesian cultures. Rice is grown virtually everywhere around the country, specially on Java province. Indonesia has about 250 speech forms, each with its own dialect. But only one official language, Bahasa Indonesia.

- The do's and don'ts when you are in Indonesia:

- Certain body languages can be very offensive to Indonesians:

- Crossing your arms over your chest or standing with your hands on your hips can be interpreted as aggressive behavior, especially when talking to older people.
    - It is also a very serious offense to sit with your feet on the table.
    - Don't beckon someone using bent index finger. Instead, extend your right hand and make a motion using the cupped fingers turned downward.

- Do not point with your forefinger, but use instead your right thumb for pointing. Left hand is considered the unclean hand, therefore use your right hand only when giving or receiving things if it's possible. If you have to use your left hand, say 'maaf' (excuse me).
- Loud voices are also very offensive. The more important and controversial the subject is, the quieter the voice is likely to become. People from Java are not as loud as those from Sumatera.
- Never touch older people's heads even if you mean to be playful.
- Make certain to ask your guest to eat or drink when you serve food, since she or he would normally wait until you verbally offer it by saying 'silahkan' (please). They will do like wise when you are a guest.
- Remember to greet the head of the household first when visiting an Indonesian home. Shake hands when arriving and when leaving with the members of the household, start with the elderly first.
- Don't put your hands on your hips or cross your arms when talking to someone. Indonesians are not comfortable at public displays of lustful hugging or kissing. Avoid outburst and public displays of emotion and displeasure.

When travelling to Indonesia, the best sources for information is the Tourist Office or Kantor Pariwisata. This can be found easily near the governor's office in large cities. In the smaller cities or towns you can find this office right inside a hotel or in a travel agency. The best information can be found when you go to the Directorate General Information of Tourism in Jakarta. They publish books, brochures, and maps, which cover the 27 provinces in Indonesia. Both in Indonesian and English languages.

Some airlines also publish their travel information brochures. Their employees also are very knowledgeable. The customs procedures in Indonesia nowadays have become more relaxed at the international airports. They have green and red routes, which cater to the passengers. If you have nothing to declare, you can use the green route. Here they don't inspect your luggage. They also have the duty free items. You can bring 200 cigarettes and about 50 cigars or two pounds of tobacco. Also cameras with reasonable amounts of films, two liters liquor and perfume for personal use. Weapons/ ammunition, narcotic as well as video cameras, TV sets, radio-cassettes recorders, books which contain Chinese characters and pornographically items are prohibited to enter Indonesia.

You must keep a list of your passport number, travelers' check numbers, tickets, important contact addresses and other useful info. It's a good idea to make copies of each document. Carry one copy with you and leave the other ones with your relatives at home. You should also insure your valuable belongings. Unless you are entering Indonesia from an infected area, you don't have to have the International Health Certificate with you to show the customs at the airport. You can also obtain an International Driver's License if you plan to rent a car or a motorcycle in Indonesia.

As for what's appropriate to wear in Indonesia, you should pack very lightweight garments, wrinkle free materials and some comfortable shoes to wear. For women, a not too skimpy bikini can be worn in the pool or beach areas. Shorts are considered not too appropriate to be worn by women in public. Indonesians tolerate shorts and T-shirts in tourist shops, hotels and at the beaches, but not at their homes or places of worships. Footwear should be taken off when entering Indonesian homes. Slippers and sandals only acceptable when the occasions are not formal. Wear shoes when attending weddings, churches or other formal gatherings.

Most big hotels provide laundry services for their guests. You can also exchange your US dollars at Banks and Money Exchangers. Banks and Money Exchangers are normally opened from 8.00 AM to 5.00 PM. Avoid exchanging money at the airports, train stations and leading hotels for their rates are not as good as other places mentioned above.

Indonesia is very much a cash oriented society. Major credit cards can be used in Indonesia but only in large cities. When using your credit card, be sure that you look at the total amount carefully before signing your card. Retain your copy (charge slips could be easily altered by adding extra zeroes). Take enough cash with you in the first place so you don't have to go through some hassles to have money wired when you need additional cash. The service of wiring money can cost you up to US$ 15.00. Above all, be careful when traveling alone. It is highly advisable to travel in a large group with a native tour guide. You can arrange this when booking your travel with Travel Agency.

Chapter V. Section 3. Grammar Notes

The most common part of Indonesian sentence consists of two parts. The subject and predicate.

- The predicate is the part of the sentence which tells something about a person, place or thing. It tells us what something or someone is or was, what happens/ ed to it, what it does/ did/ /will do, etc.
- The subject in a sentence is the thing about which info is given. The predicate is the info given about the subject.

Saya tinggal di hotel	I stay in the hotel
Saya mau hotel	I want a hotel
Dia suka kamar yang	She/ he likes a room which

Note: The word order of the sentence may either subject which is followed by predicate or predicate followed by subject. There is no difference in meaning aside from one nuance between two word orders, either subject - predicate or predicate - subject.

Orang mana tuan?	What nationality are you sir?
Nyonya suka kamar yang mana?	What room do you like, maam?
Nona mau cari taksi?	You (miss) want to look for a cab?
Tuan mau pesan kamar?	You (sir) want to book a room?

In Indonesian, generally the last word of the predicate which receives sentence stress.

Saya sedang tinggal di hotel Hilton I am staying at the Hilton.

In other cases, it is the particular word on which we intend to put a focus, which receives the sentence stress. For instance, if we want to stress our dislike on certain service we receive from a hotel, we might stress the word suka rather than the last word of the predicate.

Saya tidak suka hotel itu I don't like that hotel.

In sentence containing interrogatives, the interrogative is the part of the predicate which will receive the sentence stress.

Berapa penerbangannya? How many flights are there?

▪ The personal pronouns:

Saya	I/ mine/ my
dia	she/ her/ hers/ he/ him/ his and it/ it's/ its
anda/ kamu	you/ your/ yours
mereka	they/ their, theirs
kita/ kami	we/ our/ us

▪ The demonstrative are ini this/ these, itu that/ those.

The demonstrative follows the word they modify.

Hotel Hilton itu mahal Hilton hotel (lit. that) is expensive.

The demonstrative also can be used to modify pronouns and personal names.

Tuan Steven ini dari Amerika. Mr. Steven (lit.this) is from US.

Saya ini orang Amerika. I (lit. this) am an American.

As a general rule, sentence stress in normal sentence usually comes at the end of the phrase, which contains the predicate. If the stress comes elsewhere, that's because a particular emphasis is desired. Thus, the difficulty facing most American students is how to put the stress at the end of the predicate. Note that no matter whether the word order is subject-predicate or predicate-subject, the stress always falls on the last word of the predicate.

Tuan Steven bisa berbahasa Inggeri. Mr. Steven can speak English.

Dia yang mau tinggal di hotel itu. He/ she is the one who wants to stay in that hotel.

Rully nama anak muda itu. Rully is that young fellow's name.

Nano tidak mau berenang. Nano didn't want to swim.

Dia bapak saya. He is my father.

▪ The nominalizing prefix pe + suffix an also changes the verbs to Nouns.

nginap	to spend the night
penginapan	lodging
periksa	to inspect
pemeriksaan	inspection
terbang	to fly
penerbangan	flight
layan	to serve
pelayanan	service
labuh	to anchor

pelabuhan harbor

- The prefix ke plus the suffix an changes some verbs or adjectives to nouns.

berangkat	to depart
keberangkatan	the departure
terlambat	late
keterlambatan	the delay

Below are some common phrases used at the customs:

Dimana tempat ambil bagasi?
Where is the baggage claim?

Ini paspor saya.
This is my passport

Bagasi saya hilang.
I lost my luggage.

Saya hanya stop over di sini.
I am only here for a stop-over.

Saya tidak punya barang2 terlarang.

CHAPTER VII
AT THE POST OFFICE
DI KANTOR POS

Chapter VII

At the Post Office

Chapter VII. Section 1. Cultural Notes

Post offices in Indonesia tend to be very chaotic. People do not line up to buy the postal items. They usually fight their way through the crowd. First thing you have to do is find out which counter you need to go to, then proceed to fight your way to the crowd. Most counters handle the purchasing of the stamps, accept parcels and sell money orders. After buying your stamps from one of the counters, affix them on the right hand side of the envelope and return them to the counter for them to stamp the letter.

If you need to send a letter, it is advisable to go to the big cities where the mail is generally more secured than those in the smaller cities. Regular airmail to the US or Europe usually takes about seven to nine days to arrive. Express airmail will be delivered a little bit earlier. If you need to send a telegram, you have to go to a separate telegram office. They don't handle it at a regular post office.

Surat itu belum sampai.

That letter has not arrived yet.

Tukang pos itu kurang mengerti pertanyaan saya.

The mailman did not seem to understand my question, instead of Tukang pos itu tidak mengerti pertanyaan saya.

They are indicated by the context of the sentence or we use the word such as semua all, banyak many/ much, para a group of, etc. we can also pluralize the noun by duplicating the noun, anak child become anak-anak (or anak2) children.

Semua orang antri di depan loket di kantor pos.
All of the people stand in line in front of the counter at the post office.

- Pegawai Pos: "Oh, ini akan dikirim ke Seattle?"
- Tuan Smith: "Ya, dan juga saya punya beberapa surat untuk dikirim ke Seattle juga."
- Pegawai pos: "Baiklah, mana suratnya?"
- Tuan Smith: "Ini dia. Saya mau kirim dengan kilat." Berapa lama akan tiba disana?"
- Pegawai pos: "Oh, ini surat-surat ke alamat yang sama dengan paket ini?"
- Tuan Smith: "Tidak semua. Hanya satu yang sama alamatnya dengan paket ini.
Walaupun semua tujuannya ke kota Seattle."
- Pegawai Pos: "Oh begitu. Disini ada tiga surat yang alamatnya berbeda.
Hanya satu yang punya alamat sama dengan paket ini.
Untuk paket ini ongkos kirimnya sekitar seratus dua puluh ribu rupiah.
Satu surat ini bisa saya tempelkan ke paket ini. Sedangkan surat2 yang lain nya ini perangkonya sekitar lima belas ribu, tergantung beratnya.
Saya harus timbang dulu. Ya, surat2 ini ongkos perangkonya masing2
Rp.6.000.-"
- Tuan Smith: "Tidak apa, asal mereka sampai dengan segera dan aman.
Makan waktu berapa lama kira-kira?"
- Pegawai Pos: "Oh, kurang lebih dua minggu, saya kira."
- Tuan Smith: Baiklah, ini uang saya."
- Pegawai pos: "Terima kasih. Selamat siang."
- Tuan Smith: "Oh, sudah sore sekarang. Selamat sore."

Dialogue VII-2

- Nona Mala: "Permisi, saya mau tanya."

Pegawai Pos: "Oh, ibu dapat kiriman dari Amerika."

Nona Mala: "Ya dan kiriman itu sudah dikirim sekitar dua bulan yang lalu.
Saya heran kenapa baru saja tiba?"

Pegawai Pos: "Saya kurang tahu. Mungkin dikirim lewat kapal laut?
Bisa saya cek. Tunggu sebentar."

Nona Mala: "Baiklah."

Pegawi Pos: "Ini dia. Rupanya kiriman ibu salah dikirim ke Bali.
Baru minggu yang lalu dikirim ke sini."

Nona Mala: "Oh itu alasannya. Pantas saya tunggu lama sekali."
Tetapi syukurlah tiba disini dengan selamat.
Terima kasih pak. Selamat siang."

Pegawai Pos: "Kembali, bu. Selamat siang."

Chapter VII. Section 5. Reading Text

Di Kantor Pos

Kantor pos di Indonesia tidak seperti kantor pos2 di negeri lain. Disini orang2 yang mau membeli benda2 pos tidak harus antri. Mereka umumnya berdesak-desakan. Siapa yang kuat akan lebih dulu dilayani dari siapa yang lemah. Khususnya wanita, mereka biasanya paling belakangan. Juga semua surat2 yang akan dikirim baik di dalam maupun ke luar negeri harus di timbang satu persatu oleh pegawai pos. Sesudah itu kita beli perangko sesuai dengan yang dikatakan oleh pegawai pos yang menolong kita. Perangko2 itu kita rekatkan diatas kanan amplop. Kemudian kita serahkan surat kita yang telah diberi perangko kembali ke pegawai pos yang akan mengecap surat kita dan memasukkan ke dalam kotak surat untuk segera dikirim.

Kantor pos di Indonesia buka dari jam tujuh pagi sampai jam lima sore dari hari Senin sampai hari Jumat. Pada hari Sabtu mereka buka setengah hari. Hari Minggu dan hari2 libur mereka tutup.

Dialogue VII-1

Postal clerk: "Good afternoon, sir."

Mr. Smith: "Good afternoon, maam."

Postal clerk: "May I help you?"

Mr. Smith: "Yes, I'd like to send a package to US. This is the address."

Postal clerk: "Oh, this is going to Seattle?"

Mr. Smith: "Yes, and I also have several letters to be sent to Seattle as well."

Postal clerk: "Okay, where are the letters?"

Mr. Smith: "Here they are. I'd like to send them via express. How long will they get there?"

Postal clerk: "Oh, these letters are going to the same address as this package?"

Mr. Smith: "Not all of them. Only one is going to the same address. Although they all go to Seattle."

Postal clerk: "Oh, is that so? Here are three letters with different addresses. Only one has the same address as this package. This package is going to cost about Rp. 120.000.00. This one letter I can affix it to the package. The postage stamps for the other letters will be around Rp. 15.000.00 each, depending on the weight. I have to weigh them first. Yes, it's Rp. 16.000 each."

Mr. Smith: "No problem, as long as they will get there safely. How long will they get there?"

Postal clerk: "Oh, approximately in two weeks, I think."

Mr. Smith: "Okay. Here is the money."

Postal clerk: "Thanks. Good day."

Mr. Smith: "Oh, it's already night time. Good night."

Dialogue VII-2

Miss Mala: "Excuse me, I'd like to ask something."

Postal clerk: "Sure, what do you need?"

Miss Mala: "I'd like to pick up a parcel."

Postal clerk: "Where is the notice?"

Miss Mala: "Here it is. I hope I can get it now."

Postal clerk: "Oh, you got a parcel from America."

Miss Mala: "Yes, and it was sent two months ago.
I wonder why it's not here yet?"

Postal clerk: "I don't know. Perhaps it was sent by sea.
I can check it. Wait a minute."

Miss Mala: "Okay."

Postal clerk: "Here it is. It looks like your parcel was sent to Bali.
Just last week it was sent here."

Miss Mala: "Oh that's the reason. No wonder I waited for a long time.
But thank God it arrived here safely.
Thank you, sir. Good afternoon."

Postal clerk: "You're welcome, maam. Good afternoon."

Reading text

At the Post Office

The post offices in Indonesia are not like those in other countries. Over here if you want to buy postal items, you don't have to stand in line. People usually have to fight their way to get to the counter. Those who are strong will be served earlier than those who are not so strong. Women especially will be the last to be served. All the letters, both domestic and international must be weighed in one by one by the postal clerk first. After that we have to buy the stamps according to how much it weigh and where will it go. We affix the stamps on the upper right hand side of the envelope and bring it back to the clerk so it can be stamped and sent away.

Post offices in Indonesia open from 7:AM to 5:00 PM everyday. They only open half day on Saturdays and close on Sundays and holidays.
